PUBLIC LIBRARIES 10

PUBLIC LIBRARIES

Annual report 1900

To the regents of the University of the State of New York

I have the honor to report on the public libraries division of the home education department for the year ending Sep. 30, 1900, as follows:

Staff and expenditures. The work has been done by the same staff as last year as well as possible with the limited force, but the need of a subinspector is increasingly felt.

The expenditures of the year for home education including public libraries, traveling libraries and collections, study clubs and extension teaching were: cash apportionment to public libraries $28,060.43, books and specimens $6435.89, fittings $389.60, supplies $11.94, printing $1274.82, travel $486.24, telegrams and telephone $40.86, salaries $19,853.71, a total of $56,553.49, being an increase of $6553.49 over 1899. The receipts from fees were $2601.19.

PUBLICATIONS

The New York state library makes up each January a list of 500 of the leading books of the previous year, and submits it to the librarians of the state and others interested for their vote as to which are the best 50 books to be added to a village library. About 200 people usually express opinions which are tabulated. Obviously this list must not be received as authoritative, but simply as an expression of the opinion of persons so situated as to know what books are most in demand even if they are not intrinsically the best. The vote depends entirely on the voter's idea of what should determine the additions to a village library, many believing it better to add a second rate book that will be widely read rather than a better one which will be called for less than half as often. With this list as a basis, the state library issues every spring a bulletin of the best books. This bulletin represents the judgment of the state library staff and is annotated to indicate clearly the nature of each book, thus making it of great practical value not only as a guide to buying for public and private libraries but as a check list for individual reading. Individuals find it infinitely easier to work with 200 of the best books than to pick in a helter skelter way from the 60,000 new books which each year brings forth, nearly a quarter of them in our own language. Single copies of this bulletin may be had from the state library for 10 cents.

Distribution of our own publications. Our constituents, instead of being massed about us in a single city like those of most libraries, are scattered over a great state. Of necessity we must do much of our work at long range and this can be done best and cheapest through printed matter. At best the printing bills will be large and we are unlikely to have at our disposal at any time means to print all that would be useful enough to our public to justify the cost. We must therefore reduce the amount to the limit of our appropriation and any practical economy will enable us to do just so much more useful work.

Hereafter we propose to send to each registered library by express twice each year, such of our publications as they will permanently preserve for public reference, and our inspector on each visit will look to see that the set is thus available. Sending our various bulletins by mail as each number is issued involves an expense too large for our limited funds, and we propose to discontinue mailing these except on special request from libraries feeling the need of early copies. Some years ago I proposed to the regents that our bulletins should be regularly entered as second class matter so that they would be entitled to go through the mails at pound rates, and the subscription price of 50c a year was fixed. This plan, if adopted, would at small expense greatly increase the usefulness of the work done through these printed aids.

LIBRARIES CHARTERED, REGISTERED AND TRANSFERRED

Chartered, admitted and transferred

During the year three permanent and 17 provisional library charters were granted. One library was admitted to the University with existing charter and five provisional charters were made permanent. Six library charters were amended and one charter was surrendered. Four library transfers were approved of which three were from school libraries.

The following tables show location, name, volumes and property of each library.

Support. Of 175 University libraries 112 have received grants from the state during the year, and 87 or one half of all have been aided by local taxation. 23 report receipts from invested funds, but only two of the entire number show an income from endowment equal to their annual expenses. Too many are still dependent on occasional gifts and voluntary service of their managers. 23 of these libraries report income from gifts and from no other source. This condition merits careful attention from the libraries concerned, for while the givers show creditable generosity there is a serious danger that the public library will be marked as a charity and not, what it is in reality, a public necessity. As a charity its friends may in time grow weary of the effort to sustain it, but as a necessity it ought to hold its place with the school in the annual budget for the public tax. Plans to provide a sufficient and assured income should be urged from the outset of every library enterprise. The law favors this course; it remains only to persuade the people.

Growth of free lending libraries. The number of independently organized libraries in the University has been increased by 20 and is now 175. Those free for circulation contain 606,332 volumes, an increase of 72,193 or 13% for the year. Their circulation was 2,182,154, an increase of 109,465, showing an average circulation of 360 for each 100 volumes. The new libraries when applying for admission varied in size from nothing to 2000 volumes and in respect to property from $100 to $35,500. The largest represented valuable endowments, but the greater number, the 17 which obtained charters provisional for five years, stood for the earnest self-denying efforts of small communities. Five libraries which five years ago began their work with small resources have this year vindicated the promise of their foundation by appearing each with property ranging from $1205 to $5229 to claim permanent charters.

The following table shows the number of libraries in the University with their volumes and circulation for the last eight years.

Registered libraries

Under the University law a library "not owned by the public but maintained for its welfare and free use" may receive aid from local taxation if registered by the regents "as maintaining a proper standard." Hence, besides the 175 University libraries maintaining the minimum standard, there are 86 on this special register coming under inspection equally with the others and entitled to the same privileges of state and local aid. Under the rules a branch library of 1000 volumes conforming to the standard may be independently registered.

The following table shows the libraries and branches added to this register during the year. The full list will be found in the general statistical table.

INSPECTION

Libraries visited. During the year the inspector, William R. Eastman, and his assistants visited in 43 counties 141 libraries, of which 46 had not been previously reached and six are not connected with the University. Charters were granted to 21 of the libraries visited, one was admitted to the University and seven others were registered as maintaining a proper standard. Grants of public library money were made to 76 of these libraries during the year. Dates of inspection are shown in the general statistical tables.

Growth of libraries under inspection. In addition to the chartered, admitted and registered libraries there are 199 academic and high school libraries free for public use. These are also under regents inspection and are included in the following table showing the whole number of free lending libraries under inspection and comparing them and their work for the past eight years with those not related to the University.

GRANTS

In December 1899, in view of greatly increased demands on the public library money, the regents directed that half of each approved application be paid and $5561.58 was accordingly apportioned. After the supply bill appropriation of $30,000 became available, the unpaid remainders and other grants were paid in April, June and July 1900. During the year $26,891.43 was paid to 173 libraries including branches, an average of $155 to each library. At the close of the year 33 approved applications amounting to $4021.24 remained unpaid for lack of funds. The grants for the year would have reached $30,912.67 but for this deficiency. There are now 263 libraries which have at some time received state aid.

READING AND AIDS

Education of taste for reading. It is generally understood that a taste for good pictures is a matter of slow development. The cheap, gaudy chromo on the walls of the settler's cabin is often a pioneer. People learn to like good pictures and develop their taste by comparing and recognizing that one is better than another. No progress is made till there is something to compare. So in reading. One who reads nothing has no basis for any preference. Some have been so much impressed by this fact that they are willing to let children or adults read dime novels or "yellow" journals, if necessary, to get the reading habit started. A foothold once gained, progress toward better things may begin. Some eminent librarians have gone so far as to advocate furnishing what most of us call trash for ground bait in order to attract those who they think would not rise to anything higher. We have never encouraged this extreme view, but have felt that the library should offer the best that the reader was ready for. Many readers find their way to the best books only through reading and outgrowing the poorer; the problem before the public library is to decide at what point in this process of growth its work should begin. Only an extremist would suggest that it should furnish the poorest as a beginning for the weakest readers; only an extremist would ask that nothing be supplied but the classics and masters of literature in each field. A recent editorial in Town and country voices the opinion of many thoughtful observers in a way to command respect as follows:

In his recent chat upon modern books, Mr Howells has voiced the sentiments of a great many literary and thinking people when he declares that the era of the half million copies novel is but a transition one connecting a period when reading was done by the few with a future time when reading with discernment will be done by the many. The popular book, all thinking people realize, is not necessarily a good book, and the advertisement of the publisher that a novel has sold into the hundreds of thousands does not stamp it as one of literary merit. Yet the reign of the popular and ephemeral book does not mean a degeneration of literary taste. As Mr Howells says, we must not think the lovers of a half million copy novel are recreant lovers of Hawthorne, or George Eliot, or Mr Thomas Hardy. The most part of them never heard of those men. We may liken our immeasurable mental level to the wild, uncultivated prairie country, which, when men begin to plant it with trees, they first plant with the coarse, rank cottonwood. After a generation or two of cottonwood, they can grow oaks and elms and maples on the prairie, but not at first. You may be sure that the plains in which the literary cottonwoods now flourish have never grown oaks or elms or maples. Up to the time the readers of the recent successes began to read them they had read dime novels and story papers, or they went to the theaters. And this stage is therefore a hopeful one, for these books reclaim from illiteracy a wide area of humanity and will convert them finally into fields of genuine literature. And so the popular novel, while it has its dangers, is on the whole a hopeful sign and it gives fair promise for the future.

Giving away library books. Most large libraries accumulate in their duplicate or exchange divisions large numbers of soiled or slightly mutilated books, magazines, pamphlets and extra copies which they have no hope either of selling or exchanging for years to come, if ever, and yet hesitate to send to the paper mill, knowing that there are thousands of people who would read and value the books if they could be put in their hands. It is an economic waste for libraries crowded for space to postpone the solution of this problem. Besides the room occupied, time, which is money, is every year spent in cleaning, arranging, inventorying or thinking about these puzzling collections, not quite good enough to sell or exchange, and a little too good to throw away.

Libraries should devote some attention to judiciously giving away material of this kind. Often it is impracticable for the library owning it to reach personally the persons who ought to use it. It is not worth the expense of ordinary library circulation with charges, returns and incidental labor. Help in the beneficent work can be secured from libraries, schools, hospitals, prisons, societies or individuals who appreciate the value of good reading and will be willing to furnish the time and labor if the material can be given them. A circular letter to principals of schools and librarians, explaining what is wanted, would secure many volunteers willing to undertake to place these surplus books where they would do most good.

Many people have hundreds of the best magazines, clean and in good condition, which they are unwilling to burn up and yet which are greatly in the way. Many magazine publishers have back numbers entirely fresh but beyond any probable demand and would be willing to give them for this use instead of destroying them, because their circulation would make new friends and possible subscribers for the magazine, and for the higher reason that the deliberate destruction of thousands of beautifully printed and illustrated magazines seems a crime in a land where so many are hungry for good reading and where thousands are ruining their eyes over books and newspapers full of poor matter, badly printed, when they would much prefer to read the beautifully printed and illustrated magazines if they had opportunity. A library or school might wisely lend these two or three times till they were either too much soiled or the demand had lessened, when they could be given outright to some one who in turn might later pass them on again, so that a score of readers might possibly see them before they went finally into the waste paper. As the loss would be little if a copy lent was not returned, it would answer very well if no record were kept, but the borrower given a slip requesting him to return the book so that another might have it. Details would be worked out by experience but the principle involved is an organized system by which great quantities of the best books and magazines that are now destroyed may have many more readings. This system should be managed by a few central libraries, but the smaller libraries should be in active cooperation as distributing centers.

LIBRARY PROGRESS

The number of libraries reporting is 1035, an increase of 50 over last year. The increase in the class of public libraries is 58. Libraries supported wholly or in part by local taxation are 641 or 61 more than in 1899. Those receiving state aid in some form are 778 or 71 more than last year. The free lending libraries are 460, a gain of 29.

These free lending libraries added 207,806 volumes and increased their circulation 1,056,918, an average daily advance of 2895. The total free circulation in the state was 8,452,445, an average of 23,157 daily, 387 for each 100 volumes in those libraries and 1163 for each 1000 of the population.

The following table shows a continued increase in every item except one since 1894. In the volumes per 1000 population, there is apparent decrease for 1900 because the new census figures on which comparison is based are 754,669 larger than those for 1892 on which statistics for 1893–99 were computed. Similar discrepancies are always likely to occur at the point where a change is made to a new basis.

Paris exposition. American library interests were represented by an exhibit prepared by the New York state library, illustrative of the various library activities in this country. J. L. Harrison, librarian of Providence atheneum, and Mary W. Plummer, director of Pratt institute library, were in attendance to explain the exhibit to visitors.

There was neither United States nor New York appropriation which could be used for this exhibit and the American library association had no funds available to supplement the work done by the Library school. On laying the probable usefulness to library interests before Mr Carnegie, he promptly placed in my hands $1000 for necessary incidental expenses and also agreed to assume all traveling and living expenses of two librarians if some of our best graduates would undertake the serious labor without salary. Both those selected by the Library school faculty accepted the honor and responsibility and to their faithful work and that of Miss Florence Woodworth, director's assistant, to whom I intrusted immediate charge of the preparation, was due much of the success of the library exhibit. It justly received high praise, not alone from visitors from foreign nations, who found much that could be made of practical value in their own countries, but also from the exposition itself, which awarded to the exhibit the highest testimonial in its power, the grand prix. Our library and home education exhibits were so closely allied as to constitute practically a single exhibit. It is significant of the estimation given at the world's exposition of the work to which this new department has been devoted to read the following summary of awards, which confirms the wisdom of the legislature and of the regents in undertaking an experiment of which the practical value remained to be proved. No possible indorsement could give stronger claim to its continued and fuller support than this official recognition.

Awards

To the American library association, a grand prize for its exhibit of statistics, publications, library appliances, etc. prepared by the state library at Albany, N. Y.

To Melvil Dewey, director New York state library, a grand prize in honor of his distinguished services not only as a librarian, but as an educator whose administration during the period of revision (1889–1900) produced such marked advances in both secondary and higher education.

To the home education department, a grand prize for its exhibit of methods of education by means of reading and traveling libraries.

To the home education department, a gold medal for its exhibit of traveling libraries, study clubs and lectures.

To the home education department, a diploma of honorable mention for its collective exhibits from Chautauqua, Brooklyn institute, Pratt institute, People's institute and Rochester Atheneum and mechanics institute.

During the exposition, also, a bibliographic congress was held, followed by an international congress of librarians. The attendance at the latter meeting was large and interesting. The papers in French were on matters of special interest to continental libraries.

Fuller notes, with titles of papers read, are in Library journal, Sep. 1900, p. 580–82.

Legislation

New York. By amendment to the University law it was provided that the uniform charter for cities of 50,000 to 250,000 population should not supersede existing library laws.

State libraries. Maryland. Indexer and cataloguer in state library at a salary of $600 appointed for two years by governor with advice of library committee.

South Carolina. State librarian's salary increased from $600 to $800. State library trustees to distribute state publications from surplus copies in legislative library to approved colleges, schools and historical societies in the state.

Iowa. Miscellaneous and historical departments of state library consolidated. Annual salaries of employees and annual appropriation for maintenance fixed.

Public libraries. Massachusetts. Library commission may spend $100 for books for free libraries owned and controlled by towns whose valuation does not exceed $600,000.

New Jersey. Library commission of five appointed by the governor to give advice to libraries. May give $100 for books to any free library having less than 5000 books and spending an equal amount for same purpose. Library trustees may file certificate of amount needed to buy land and erect buildings even after the prescribed time has elapsed. Common council may make additional appropriations to equip and decorate free public libraries and issue bonds at 4% therefor not to exceed $50,000 in cities of the first class, $15,000 in those of the second class and $5000 in cities of the third and fourth class.

Virginia. Cities and incorporated towns may establish public libraries and reading rooms and levy one mill tax therefor.

Mississippi. Public libraries and those free to public school children exempt from tax.

Ohio. Books and furniture of county law libraries exempt from tax. Law amended as to appropriations for such libraries.

Kentucky. Whenever in a city of the second class $20,000 has been raised in accordance with law for a public library city shall appropriate $5000 annually for maintenance.

Iowa. Library commission of seven: state librarian, sup't of public instruction, president of state university and 4 others (2 to be women) appointed by governor. Commission to serve without pay, employ a secretary and have $2000 for expenses. To advise libraries, promote new enterprises, cooperate with state librarian for traveling libraries and receive reports. $2000 yearly for traveling libraries.

Public library trustees may extend circulation to nonresidents and charge therefor.

School townships and rural independent districts to spend from apportionment 5 to 15 cents annually for each person of school age in buying school libraries. Books to be selected from lists prepared annually or biennially by state board of educational examiners and lent to all residents. Books to be semiannually distributed among subdistricts.

Cities and towns under 25,000 [formerly 15,000] may levy 2 mill tax for library maintenance; city council may cut down estimate of library trustees. A tax of 3 mills may be levied for real estate and building.

Taxes on bequests and legacies. The tendency of recent legislation, in its eager search for any possible source of added income to meet growing public expenditures, has been to impose taxes or repeal exemptions to the disadvantage of public libraries. We have been able to prevent proposed legislation of this sort several times by showing the injury done to the public by so short-sighted a policy. To force a man to pay for the privilege of making a gift which is solely for public benefit is as absurd as it would be for a theater on fire to refuse admission to the firemen till they had bought tickets. Philanthropists have repeatedly resented such legislation by withholding intended gifts or transferring them to another state less narrow in its policy. Eternal vigilance is needed to protect public library interests against this grave danger, for all legislation affecting corporations and taxes is liable to involve a measure of this sort. In many cases the promoter of the bill unwittingly brought in the libraries, forgetting that they were covered by the general term "corporations", in others their inclusion was intentional.

As this report goes to press word comes of the approval by the president Mar. 2, 1901, of the statute on the federal legacy tax for which a determined effort was made by a strong committee in the interests of colleges and libraries. The law as now changed has this wise provision :

That nothing in this section shall be construed to apply to bequests or legacies for uses of a religious, literary, charitable or educational character, or for the encouragement of art, or to legacies or bequests to societies for the prevention of cruelty to children, including all bequests or legacies of such character on which the tax imposed had not been paid or collected on the 1st day of March, 1901. And provided further, that the provisions of this act and of the act hereby amended shall not be held to apply to any estate where the testator or intestate died before June 13, 1898.

Library commissions in the United States. During the year Iowa and New Jersey have established library commissions, laws to this effect having been approved on the same day in both states. There are now commissions in 16 states, as shown by the following table.

LIBRARY MEETINGS

New York library association. The ninth annual meeting was held at Niagara Falls October 13–14, 1899. At the opening session papers on Four years of library progress in western New York; Echoes from the A. L. A. at Atlanta and Summer hours and work were presented.

An evening session was given to the subject of study clubs and libraries, the exercises being in the hands of representatives of the western N. Y. state federation of women's clubs.

Subjects discussed on the second day were: Value of the public library as an investment; Willingness of the people to pay for library privileges by public tax; What state law can do for the public library.

At the closing session subjects were: Handling of maps and charts in public libraries; The school and the home reading of its pupils; Revision of old school libraries and selection of books.

At the business session amendments to the constitution were adopted providing for affiliation of local library clubs with the state association and changing the constitution of the executive board. The following officers were elected.

J. H. Canfield, New York, president

P. A. Porter, Niagara Falls, vice-president

Miss M. E. Hazeltine, Jamestown, secretary

J. N. Wing, New York, treasurer

Extended reports of this meeting may be found in Library journal Nov. 1899, p. 633–35, and in Public libraries, Dec. 1899, p. 460–61.

A joint meeting of the association with the New York library club was held in New York, March 8, 1900 at the Y. W. C. A. 7 East 15th street, of which the Library journal, March 1900, p. 126–30, has a full account. Papers and discussions were on the following topics: Century of library development in New York state 1800–1900; Relation of the public library to the public school; Best books of 1899; Bookbinding; Evolution of a book; Library devices and methods; St Louis plan for meeting the demand for popular fiction by charging a small fee for some reserved duplicates.

In the evening a largely attended reception and banquet was held at the Aldine club.

The 10th annual meeting, September 26–28, 1900, at Lake Placid in the Adirondacks was the largest, most enthusiastic and most profitable yet held. The gathering included library workers and trustees not only from New York, but also from numerous other states and Canada.

Pres. J. H. Canfield's opening address called attention to the business of the librarian to make his calling a profession, through actual work accomplished, as well as by direct influence. With special preparation the workers must choose their ends wisely, keeping in view always the relative perspective and importance of all branches of the work. Great stress was laid on a willingness to wait for results and secure intelligent cooperation.

Work with the young, and the definite relations of good reading to good citizenship were dwelt on. The young must be brought to the library and through books given new visions of a new land and a new life. There will be a leading up to larger things and a new generation of readers.

A general discussion on "the public school and the public library" followed. H. L. Elmendorf, Buffalo library, emphasized the need of the work for schools, its promise and ethical side. The test of success will be in making good citizens. Education has but begun when a child leaves school.

Let the library be the heart of the school and to this end stand close to the teacher. Miss James of Wilkesbarre Pa., A. L. Peck of Gloversville and Mr Gaillard of New York continued the discussion. The last dwelt on the extension of library work through efforts of individual teachers, some of them indorsing readers' applications in large numbers and thus becoming responsible for books borrowed. Library bulletins in schoolrooms are important and valuable.

In the evening the relations of the library and the Y. M. C. A. were discussed. Mr George B. Hodge, educational secretary of the international committee of the Y. M. C. A., outlined the system of class work followed by many associations and showed the urgent need of working libraries. Five ways of cooperation with the public library were suggested: 1) the library catalogue in the association rooms; 2) library bulletins bearing on associational subjects conspicuously posted; 3) traveling libraries; 4) the Y. M. C. A. a delivery station for the public library; or 5) a branch of the public library. In the discussion following it was suggested that books for reference might meet the special needs of the association, while the public library should meet all demands for circulation.

Francis W. Halsey editor of the Saturday book review of the New York times read an interesting paper on "Book reviewing, the old order and the new."

At the morning session of the 27th, Melvin G. Dodge, librarian of Hamilton college, presented a paper on "The 20th century library and the farmer." He showed that the isolation of the farmer is disappearing before modern ways of communication and that the farmers institute, university extension with reading courses, books and agricultural experiment station bulletins are rapidly working a radical change in rural life. The traveling library is the present expedient, but large libraries in the country districts are more than a dream.

An animated discussion of the topic followed.

Miss Titcomb, secretary Vermont library commission, told of the large work of instruction needed to give to inexperienced librarians the right idea of how to get the books before their public as well as what books to offer.

By succeeding speakers many methods were proposed, such as keeping the library in the postoffice, and a library wagon to stop at every door.

The remainder of the session was given to a discussion of the "Curriculum of the library schools," based on a committee report presented to the American library association at Montreal. Many commended and some criticized the work done. Instruction can not convey experience, but for ideas and enthusiasm the trained worker is preferred. The most complete examination of the facts and principles involved in this matter was invited by those present who represented the schools.

At another session, there was discussion of the circulation of magazines, bound and unbound; relations between librarian and trustees; the St Louis plan of circulating for a fee extra copies of popular books. Mrs M. E. Craigie gave an account of the park libraries in Brooklyn.

At the evening session "Sundayschool libraries, past, present and future," by Rev. Dr Jesse L. Hurlbut, led to animated discussion.

The policy of the association in planning for future meetings was thoroughly discussed and it was voted that the annual meeting should be held regularly in one place and at Lake Placid and also that the executive board establish a "library week" at that place every autumn, within which the set programs of the association should be carried out. It was farther resolved that library workers of Canada, and of states other than New York be cordially invited to participate in "library week." The executive board were also instructed to divide the state into districts and report in 1901 the details of a plan by which each district might hold a local library conference once a year under the auspices and general advisory control of the association.

A resolution was adopted congratulating Mr J. N. Larned on the completion of his Guide to American history and conveying sincere thanks for his arduous and unrequited toil. Another vote conveyed to Mr George Iles the thanks and appreciation of the association for his gift of $5000 which, with the gift of Mr Larned's services as editor, made the annotated bibliography of American history possible. It was learned later that twice the above sum had been given by Mr Iles.

The following officers were elected:

H. L. Elemendorf, Buffalo, president

W. H. Austen, Ithaca, vice-president

Miss M. E. Hazeltine, Jamestown, secretary

J. N. Wing, New York, treasurer

Extended reports of the meeting are in the Library journal, October 1900, p. 644–47 and in Public libraries, November 1900, p. 395–98.

New York library club. Five meetings of the club were held during the year in addition to the joint meeting of March 8 with the N. Y. library association. Reports of all these meetings are in the Library journal.

October 12, 1899 at the Y. M. C. A. building in 23d st. Topics: Incunabula in New York city; Ford collection in New York public library; Brooklyn libraries; Photograph collection of Pratt institute free library.

November 8, 1899 at Mercantile library. Topics: The Mercantile library [historical]; Old newspapers in the Society library; Old newspapers in the New York public library; Hours of library service.

January 11, 1900 at the Astor library. Subject: State library laws.

February 8, 1900 at Columbia university. Subjects: Relation of the school to the library; Open shelves; Reduced postage on library books.

May 10, 1900, 15th annual meeting at Aguilar free library, 174 East 110th st. Subjects: Early American imprints; Apprentices in libraries; Volumes in circulation, a study of percentages.

Officers were elected as follows:

Wilberforce Eames, president

H. M. Leipziger, 1st vice-president

Elizabeth L. Foote, 2d vice-president

Bessie S. Smith, secretary

Theresa Hitchler, treasurer

Library journal reports the meetings for 1899 on p. 636–37, 687; for 1900 on p. 75–76, 126–30, 131–33, 297.

Buffalo library club. December 21, 1899 at Buffalo historical society rooms.

Subjects: A random chat on literature, grave and humorous. Lists and bulletins.

January 18, 1900 at Buffalo public library. Reception for Miss L. E. Stearns, librarian of the Wisconsin free library commission.

April 19, 1900 at Buffalo historical society's rooms.

Subjects: Home libraries. Preventive charity work.

May 16, 1900 at Buffalo public library.

Annual election of officers

H. L. Elmendorf, president

E. P. Van Duzee, vice-president

Ella M. Edwards, secretary-treasurer

Reports of the above meetings are in the Library journal for 1900, p. 25, 75, 239, 296–97.

American library association. The 22d general meeting June 6–12 at Montreal was attended by about 450. The new constitution was finally adopted. Canadian libraries, Public documents, Photographs and photo prints, and Cooperative cataloguing enlisted the attention of the entire conference. In the several sections into which the conference at times resolved itself, interesting programs were presented and discussed.

Children's library section discussed Methods of inducing care of books; Children's books and periodicals; Picture work; Storytelling.

The college section listened to papers on Care of periodicals, Reference work in Grosvenor library, Buffalo, N. Y., and The college vs the university library, which excited considerable discussion.

The large libraries section held two meetings. At the first, open shelves were discussed from various points of view. At the second, embracing also the trustees section, the subjects were of direct practical interest, relating specially to the business side of library administration. The trustee, What it costs to prepare a book for the public and to keep it before the public, Meaning and value of library statistics, were titles of papers read.

The round table of state library commissions listened to papers on Essentials of a good library law, and What lines of work may state library commissions most profitably undertake, each of which aroused spirited discussion.

The state and law libraries section discussed "State reports, digests and session laws," "Cooperation of state librarians and state library commissions," and "Lending of books in and out of the capital city."

The State library associations section held an informal discussion of ways and means of doing better work and reaching a wider field.

Officers for 1901:

Henry J. Carr, president

Ernest C. Richardson, 1st vice-president

Mrs S. C. Fairchild, 2d vice-president

F. W. Faxon, secretary

Gardner M. Jones, treasurer

Helen E. Haines, recorder

Library journal, August 1900 gave papers and proceedings, and an extended account appeared in Public libraries, July 1900, p. 267–305.

National educational association. The library department held its fourth meeting July 11 and 13, 1900 at Charleston S. C. The topics discussed, which had special reference to the varied relations of library and school, were: How to direct children's reading; The greater school; Value of cooperation between libraries and schools; Free traveling libraries, an aid to education and a factor in national life. A committee of three is to report in print a list of books, other than text books, published during the year, useful in connection with school work.

These officers were elected:

R. C. Metcalf, Boston, president

J. H. Raymond, Morgantown W. Va., vice-president

Miss M. E. Ahern, Chicago, secretary

Reports are in Library journal, September 1900, p. 588–90 and Public libraries, October 1900, p. 332–33.

National association of state librarians. The second annual meeting was held at Indianapolis Oct. 24–26, 1899. Papers and discussions were on: Classification and cataloguing in the state library; Uniformity in exchange of state publications: What books should a state library aim to get; What should be the scope of a bibliography of a state; How far should a state library be a circulating library; Indexing; Management of a law library. As the result of the discussion of the second topic a committee of four was appointed to promote uniformity in exchange and labeling of state publications.

Officers for 1900:

C. B. Galbreath, Ohio, president

L. D. Carver, Maine, vice-president

A. H. Chase, New Hampshire, secretary

Fuller accounts are in Library journal, November 1899, p. 623–25 and Public libraries, December 1899, p. 454–57.

The third annual meeting will be at Harrisburg Pa., Nov. 21–22, 1900.

Total	35 624

Rural library extension. On p. 473-74 of the last report I called attention to the great work before us in furnishing the best reading to farmhouses and other rural homes not having available library facilities. The suggestion has met only with warm approval. There is a steady tendency to recognize the free library as a necessity to the highest civilization just as much as the postoffice, and to extend its facilities to earth's remotest bounds as rural free delivery and other improvements are extending those of the postoffice.

In 1892, we provided in §42 of the library law that "trustees may under such conditions as they deem expedient, extend the privileges of the library to persons living outside such locality." The purpose of this new clause was to suggest definitely the desirability of granting in a liberal spirit the use of the library to those living in the section, but beyond the corporate lines of the municipality which paid for the library. The principle is sound from the standpoint of economics as well as of education. It is being accepted more and more widely. In Wisconsin 38 out of 100 public libraries are free to the farmers near them. Gifts or endowments of individuals have made this possible in some cases. In others, the townships have themselves appropriated money toward supporting libraries in neighboring cities or villages. The town of Ticonderoga recently voted without opposition to make the village library, chartered by the regents Mar. 29 1900, a township library. It is easily made clear that the fixed charges of a library for rent, fuel, lights, salaries, printing and new books are not perceptibly affected by opening it to the farmers of the section. There is a trifling extra cost for keeping the records and for increased wear of books. On the other hand, shrewd business men recognize that such a privilege is a distinct means of attracting trade. A man living between two towns will drive a little farther to do his business in the one where he is cordially welcomed and can get free from a public library books which he and his family wish to read. This liberal spirit reacts. In one case a library was opened free to the farmers who, at the first town meeting thereafter, without solicitation voted unanimously an appropriation toward its support. The farmers are usually willing to grant only a small sum at first, but as they learn to use the library and understand how much it does for their families, they almost uniformly show a liberal spirit and are willing to pay more according to their means than inhabitants of cities.

As illustrative of the steady growth of this movement, I quote from Wisconsin laws of 1899, ch. 139, amending §934 of the general statutes, this clause in the powers of libraries:

> May exchange such books with any other public library, either permanently or temporarily, and may send out traveling libraries in their own and adjoining counties; and any such board may contract with the board of supervisors of the county in which the library is situated, or with the board of supervisors of any neighboring county, or with individuals or associations, or with the board of supervisors, school board, village trustees, or common council of any neighboring town, school district, village or city, to loan the books of said library, singly or in traveling libraries, to the residents of said county, town, school district, village or city, upon the terms agreed upon in such contract; and every such board of directors, board of county or town supervisors, school district board, village trustees or common council is hereby empowered to make contracts for such purpose, and to pay the consideration agreed upon therein, to the board of directors of such library and reading room, out of the county, school district, town, village or city treasury on rendering proper accounts therefor.

An amendment is now being added to this section, authorizing annual appropriations for the use and benefit of a library not situated in the town, village or city, but the use of which is free to its inhabitants, and providing also, as farther inducement for cordial cooperation, that if this grant from outside amounts to $\frac{1}{6}$ of the library's net annual income, the authorities may appoint from the citizens making the grant, one director to serve for three years or till the appropriation is discontinued.

No careful observer can fail to see the steady onward march of the idea that the public can not afford not to provide that every citizen may have free the best of the world's wisdom and experience as preserved in books. This ideal does not seem half so visionary as would a century ago the prophecy that a letter would be delivered from the remotest hamlet in Maine to a mining camp in Montana with incredible speed and accuracy for a total cost of 2c. The marvels of modern engineering machinery and American inventions, which all the world recognizes, make it entirely reasonable to ask that great progress should be made in the organized efforts of the public to furnish the "best reading to the largest number at the least cost."

TRAVELING PICTURES

The traveling pictures now include 1256 wall pictures, 11,355 photographs mounted on 11 x 14 in. cards, 18 lanterns with screens and attachments for use of oil, gas and electric light and 13,353 lantern slides.

MISCELLANEOUS

Insuring libraries and their contents. It requires some hardihood to take a position in conflict with that held by nine tenths of thoughtful people, but in some things the majority of people have gotten into a rut so that the small minority is right.

Without doubt any man who has his eggs all in one basket and who would be ruined by a fire should insure. Two other classes must also use this admirable precaution: the man who must insure to satisfy his creditors; and the man who is so constituted that he worries over danger of fire and is given a nervous shock by every firebell stroke lest something belonging to him is endangered.

The fire insurance companies of the country pay from 47 to 52% of their premiums in losses. It thus costs as much for agents' commissions, advertising and other business expenses as total losses paid and the insured must pay double real risk in order to get a policy. This he can afford to do, till he can get lower rates, if he belongs to either of the three classes above, but insurance experts confess that it is coming to be the regular rule for large corporations and combinations, where the business management lays aside all sentiment and aims to get at least 100 cents for every dollar expended not only not to renew insurance on property which they buy, but usually to cancel the policies, taking a reduced rate in return and to carry at once their own insurance. If a building burns they rebuild it and in the long run find it costs them much less than to pay the heavy annual premiums, for they save half in business expenses paid by insurance companies. An individual can afford to do the same thing if he has his property distributed in various risks, does not worry and is not compelled to insure to protect creditors. Such persons open an insurance account in the ledger, credit it with the usual premiums each year, and when a fire occurs charge the loss and find a substantial gain by thus insuring themselves.

There is an ethical question which has great weight back of this. Those familiar with the facts are agreed that a terrible percentage of modern fires is due to the fact that property is insured. The "moral risk" is a very large one in the insurance business. The number of fires deliberately set in order to collect insurance is appalling. These often spread to adjoining property and so expose the man who insures himself; but this does not nullify the argument, for a company would have to take this same risk and charges fully for it.

Besides fires deliberately and dishonestly set, there is the much larger class caused by "friction of a $10,000 policy on property worth only $8000;" i. e. from carelessness developed by the feeling that if there should be a fire it would be a pecuniary advantage to the owner. Obviously with weak human nature so selfish as it is, the man insured for full value or more is not likely, specially if financially embarrassed, to take as much pains to rebuild chimneys, renew defective pipes and flues and broken castings, use asbestos and metal at danger points, and in a hundred ways guard against possible danger from fire as he would if his insurance had run out or he was carrying his own risk. If there were no such thing as insurance there would be an epidemic of fire protection that would at once amazingly reduce the number of losses. In a block surrounded by careless people carrying full insurance, a man may feel that he ought to insure, when if his property were detached and dependent only on his own care he would prefer to take his own risk. But if he does insure with these careless neighbors about him, he must remember that he must pay the companies for all this moral risk of fires caused by downright dishonesty or by carelessness, and must also pay the business expenses. The owner of property 75 to 100 feet from other buildings, practically free from danger from the outside, can save all business expense and all the moral risk, and with the amount he would pay in a few years in premiums can furnish permanent safeguards against fires catching and appliances for putting them out like chemical extinguishers, fire pails filled with water and hose lines so that for less cost he can have much greater safety. If the buildings are occupied as homes they will bring of course a much higher rent if it is known that the owners carry their own insurance, and therefore will take the greatest possible precautions. Any man prefers to sail or to ship his goods in a steamer on which the owners carry their own insurance for he knows the captain will be much more anxious to avoid danger than he would if possible loss to cargo or ship was to fall on a great insurance company.

If library trustees provide every safeguard and the building is struck by lightning or lost through no fault of theirs, the public ought to be willing to make a special effort to replace it. The reasons that apply to individuals about worry, protecting creditors and "all eggs in a single basket" do not apply to a community. Even those who are not ready for the public to own street cars, water works, electric light plants, etc. would have to admit that in carrying their own insurance there was less danger of abuse, irregularity and loss than in almost any other field of social cooperation.

For the reasons given above I am convinced that many public libraries ought to carry their own insurance instead of paying the very high rates demanded in many cases by insurance companies.

The year's success is again largely due to the faithful work of inspector W. R. Eastman. The proved value of his services makes clear that an assistant should be provided, as it is impossible for any one man to do half what is now demanded by the greatly increased number of libraries. We were never before, however, doing so much or so good work in advancing library interests of the state.

Respectfully submitted

FREE LENDING LIBRARIES

Geographic distribution. The following table shows the library resources of each of the 61 counties with circulation of free libraries. and this is farther compared with population and volumes available. Counties are arranged in nine local groups and comparative rank of each county and section in these respects is given.

a Many libraries derive part of their support from each of several sources.
b Some libraries free for reference are also free to a limited class for lending and included under both heads.

c Including also subscription libraries and those free to a limited class.

Comparative circulation by counties. The following list of 10 counties with the largest free circulation in proportion to population shows Erie and Fulton counties each circulating a little more than 2 books for every person. Last year there were 19 counties circulating 1000 or more volumes for each 1000 population. This year there are 21 which have passed that mark and this in spite of the fact that a material advance in population in almost every county with which comparison is made is shown by the census of 1900.

The following list of 10 counties with largest circulation in proportion to volumes places New York county at the head with an average circulation of a little more than six issues for each book. As books accumulate in the older libraries it would not be strange if there should appear a general decrease in the proportion of circulation to books. In some counties this has been the case, but in New York the increase has been constant. In fact the demand for books in that county is yet very far from being satisfied.

New York city. The following table shows the free lending libraries in the city of New York with their volumes and circulation as reported in 1900. They are arranged in each borough in order of size of circulation. The total increase for the year is 88,008 volumes or 12½%, while the increase of circulation is 646,385 or 17%. Several new libraries have been opened, the Brooklyn public library having added four branches, and the New York free circulating library one. A comparative summary of the returns of the Manhattan libraries for eight years is added.

GENERAL STATISTICS

The following tables are an abstract of 1035 reports made under the University law of 1892 by libraries having 200 or more volumes.

This shows a gain of 50 over the number reporting for 1899, with many libraries still missing from the list. Every library connected with the University is included, though in some cases without statistics for the year. When no report was received or was received too late to be included in the total summaries, no number is affixed to the name.

An attempt was made to learn the character of the classification, arrangement and catalogues of the books and of the loan systems in use in the several libraries and much valuable information on these points was obtained; but the returns were not sufficiently definite to admit of useful tabulation at this time.

Libraries are arranged in the general table in alphabetic order of location. Information respecting University libraries includes not only their particular relation to the University but also date of charter, admission or registry, number of trustees and by whom elected and date of inspection, if within the year. All returns are for the year ending June 30, 1900, unless otherwise noted. In the table of totals on pages 158–59 the number of reporting libraries "in the University" and "not in the University" are placed in parallel columns opposite their respective classes. Any item with "?" prefixed is not a verified statement but the best obtainable estimate.
